Blends

Wine blends offer more complexity than single varietal wines. In fact, some of the world's greatest wines are made from a blend of grapes rather than a single variety. By blending varietals, winemakers can change a wine's quality, complexity, flavour and characteristics.

Most of the time wine makers use the same varietal of grapes to blend the wines. In some cases, they blend white and red varietal together in order to create the best possible combination of aromas and flavours.

Sauvignon Blanc

Also known as Fume Blanc, Sauvignon Blanc is genetically related to Cabernet varieties. Genetic studies have proved that Sauvignon Blanc is a parent grape variety of Cabernet Sauvignon. Both grapes are traditional to Bordeaux in France.

Sauvignon Blanc offers prominent aromas of blackcurrant, gooseberries and fairly other exotic fruit flavours and has a combination of fresh acid and inimitable mineral overtones. If harvested early, Sauvignon Blanc develops grassy, vegetation aromas.

Sun exposure and climate change will dramatically swing its flavours and aromas. When grown in cooler parts like Marlborough in New Zealand it gives grassy aromas and a tangy grapefruit flavour. But when grown in slightly warmer areas like California and Chile it gives a herbal or a more complex and softer melon like flavour.

○ In its traditional home of France in the Loire valley it is used to make crisp white Sancerre and smoky Pouilly Fume, widely planted in Bordeaux and often blended with Semillon to make whites and famous dessert wines of Sauternes and Barsac.

Style of crisp Sauvignon Blanc is made in stainless steel tanks to keep it fresh and crisp. Occasionally, in Bordeaux and California, it is aged in oak barrels to round the texture with added vanilla and spicy notes.

An excellent aperitif, also complements seafood dishes, goat cheese, sushi and creamy salads.

Chardonnay

Also known as White Burgundy, Chardonnay is grown in many different countries. It is the most popular white variety and arguably the best in terms of the quality of wine produced. It is a main grape variety in Burgundy and it plays a crucial role in Champagne.

Chardonnay grapes make white wines but the grape itself is never white. Berries in a Chardonnay cluster turn from bright green early in the summer to golden yellow at harvest time.

This varietal generally makes a full bodied, dry white wine but its flavor dramatically varies from crisp and steely to intense and tropical, depending on where it is planted and the wine making techniques used. It develops a luscious richness and is full when grown in warm places such as California and Australia but stays more lean, crisp and refreshing in cooler places like France's Chablis region and New Zealand.

A good Chardonnay is most often described as 'buttery'. It often smells like apple, lemon, peach or citrus although some carry a hint of pineapple, mango, pear, apricot and banana as well. When aged in Oak barrels, it imparts vanilla and spicy notes into the wine.

Good with seafood like lobster, scallops as well as poultry dishes and cheese.

Pinot Grigio

Grigio or Gris means Grey in French and Italian. Although the grape varietal is known as Pinot Grigio in Italy, it originated in France's Burgundy region. It is called Pinot Gris in Alsace today but used to be known as Tokay d' Alsace. German's called it Rulander, whilst in California wines can be called either Pinot Grigio or Pinot Gris.

The Italians make of Pinot Grigio is internationally remarked and is very light in colour and fresh with delicate fruit flavor, as are wines in the Northern part of the country, particularly in Trentino - Alto Adige and in Friuli - Venezia Giulia.

The success of Italian Pinot Grigio is that growers around the world have planted many of it in the past two decades. It is New Zealand's and California's third most planted white varietal.

Pinot Gris has fairly subtle flavours of honey, smoke and spice and generally offers a nice mid - palate balance with a short, clean finish.

Riesling

Also known as Rhine Riesling and Johannisberg Riesling. Grown in the Rhiengau and Mosel valleys of Germany, Riesling is famous for its compelling aromas of apples and peaches and its lively texture. The wines also age well, especially the sweet, late harvest styles. It develops a mellow nutty richness when it is five, ten and twenty years old. It has been the premier grape varietal of Germany for centuries.

Riesling Retains its acidity as it matures, making it the ideal grape for various types of Spatlese (literally "late picked") and Auslese (literally "selected harvest") wines. Winemakers craft Riesling into an array of white wines from light, tangy and elegant to refined, rich, honeyed and age worthy (depending on vineyard location).

Ideal for Vinegar based salads or light seafood dishes, vegetable pies and light creamy pasta dishes. Also good with Thai and Chinese cuisine.

Gewürztraminer

The name incorporates Gewürz ('spicy' in German) with Tramin (a town in Northern Italy).

Gewürztraminer is an aromatic wine grape variety used in white wines and performs best in cooler climates. It is sometimes referred to colloquially as Gewürz and is written as Gewurztraminer (without the umlaut) in French.

Gewürztraminer is a variety with a pink to red skin colour which makes it a "white wine grape" as opposed to the blue to black-skinned varieties commonly referred to as "red wine grapes".

The variety has high natural sugar and the wines are white and usually off-dry, with a flamboyant bouquet of lychees. Indeed, Gewürztraminer and lychees share the same aroma compounds.

Dry Gewürztraminers may also have aromas of roses, passion fruit and floral notes. Its flavour qualities include honey, pumpkin, spice, cinnamon, apricot, pear and rose. The wine is delicious; fruity with strong aromas, a very perfumed and flowery bouquet.

Good with far Eastern cuisine and spicy dishes like Indian and Sri Lankan cuisine.

Trebbiano

Trebbiano is the second most widely planted grape in the world.

It gives good yields but tends to yield undistinguished wine. It can be fresh and fruity but does not keep long. Its high acidity makes it important in Cognac production.

Also known as Ugni blanc, it has many other names reflecting a family of local sub types, particularly in Italy and France.

Good with a white choice of food including seafood, poultry, pasta and heavy salads.

Red Wines

Gamay

Most popular French grape varieties have been imitated in other countries. But the fresh, vibrant red wines of the Beaujolais countryside in the south of Burgundy, which are made with Gamay grapes, have yet to be successfully imitated. Only in Beaujolais and to a lesser extent in the Loire Valley is Gamay important for winemaking.

The highest quality Gamay wines of the world are called Beaujolais - Villages and cru Beaujolais and come from the surrounded villages in Beaujolais. Its famous, fresh, raspberry-like flavour and bright acidity makes Beaujolais a good match for many different foods.

Good with grilled tuna, veal, lamb, beef steak served with mild sauces.

Pinot Noir

Over many centuries Burgundy - France has produced legendary wines such as Clos de Vougeot, Romanee Conti, La Tache, Chambertine and Le Musigny. As in France, the wines are named for their vineyard or districts rather than the grape varietal from which they were made. But behind all the great wines is one grape varietal - Pinot Noir. Not only in Burgundy, pinot noir plays an important role in the Champagne region too.

In modern times, the Pinot Noir grape is grown in Italy, Germany, California, Oregon, New Zealand, Chile, Southern France and elsewhere. The varietal always manages to express the taste of the place it was grown in.

Pinot Noir berries have notoriously thin skins which contributes to the wine's lighter red colour and rather delicate flavours. Therefore, Pinot Noir demands a cool climate, low yield and great care in the vineyard.

Pinot Noir makes some medium - bodied reds with perfumed aromas that can also evolve with age.

It displays summer fruit flavours when young. Oak maturation adds a creamy, vanilla dimension to the wine. With age, aromas of game and prunes develop.

Good with cold cuts, pork dishes and Asian cuisine.

Cabernet Sauvignon

Arguably the world's most famous grape, this is the primary grape variety in all of the five famous first-growth wines recognized in 1855, under the classification of the top Bordeaux estates. Bordeaux is the birth place of Cabernet Sauvignon.

Cabernet Sauvignon grapes are known for their small size which gives big flavours to the wine and it makes deep colour, full bodied, vivid black current and bell - peppery aromas, famously astringent texture that helps the wines to age gracefully.

Good with red meat served with rich flavour sauces, grilled tuna, swordfish and shark meat.

Syrah

In France the grape is known as Syrah and it yields the full bodied, perfumed and age worthy red wines in Northern Rhone. It is increasingly grown in other wine countries as well. Known mostly as Shiraz in the new world this is responsible for some of the most profound and desirable wines, especially in Australia.

Syrah tastes of blackberry, damson, plum fruits, a whiff of smoke, a hint of chocolate and an occasional blast of violets.

It blends well with other varieties such as sweeter Grenache and muddier Mourvedre, as it is in the southern Rhone France.

Good with red meat served with heavy sauces and Indian or Sri Lankan spicy food.

Dolcetto

Dolcetto ('little sweet one') is an early ripening, low acid red grape variety cultivated almost exclusively in the provinces of Cuneo and Alessandria in the North Western Italian region of Piedmonte. The wines produced are soft, round fruit and fragrant with flavours of liquorice and almonds.

Alba is known for producing the finest quality good wines within the seven Dolcetto DOC's in Piedmonte.

It's best drunk within a year or two but some reputed wine makers manage to make it taste better by aging it for a time period in the bottle.

Good with chicken appetizers, pasta dishes prepared in a mild tomato based sauce. scallops, shrimps, garoupa served with mild creamy sauce and cheese, mozzarella, ricotta, brie or gouda.

Nebbiolo

Nebbiolo is thought to derive its name from the Italian word 'nebbia' which means 'fog'. It is also derived from the word nobile which means noble. Grate black grape variety is responsible for some of the finest and longest-lived wines in Italy. It makes the legendary wines of Barolo and Barbaresco, which includes a gloriously perfumed notes of violets, roses, tar and spices, with high acidity, sweet fruits and powerful tannins.

Good with red meat dishes served with rich heavy sauces, game, mushroom and Eastern European cuisine.

Nero d' Avola

An increasingly reputable red grape variety that is one of the best in Sicilia and known as Calabrese. Like Shiraz, Nero d' Avola requires a good site, warmth and low vine training to succeed. At its best, it produces deep coloured wines that have a wild plum and chocolate character, high levels of tannins and decent acidity.

Merlot

The word Merlot means young “Merle,” the black bird in French. Merlot is a thin - skinned grape variety. Vineyard owners in Bordeaux have grown Merlot for centuries and blends this feminine type, soft, mellow and sweet characteristic to balance out tougher characters in other grapes. This offers a range of fresh flavours like plum, cherries, blueberries and blackcurrant mixed with cocoa and black pepper tones.

Good with lasagna and pasta dishes with tomato based sauces, roast turkey, roast chicken, pan seared salmon and mild to medium hard cheese.

Pinotage

Pinotage is South Africa's signature variety. It was bred as a cross between Pinot Noir and Cinsaut (hence the portmanteau name of Pinotage). It typically produces deep red varietal wines with smoky, bramble and earthy flavors and at times with notes of bananas and tropical fruit but has been criticized for the smell of acetone at times.

Good with grilled or smoked red meat, game and served with rich sauces and tuna steak served with teriyaki sauce.

South Africa

Sangiovese

The most widely planted red grape variety in Italy. It has made delicious, tangy red wines in Tuscany for hundreds of years and has adapted well to different locations within Italy.

Sangiovese is like Pinot Noir where the variety expresses the taste of the place where it is grown. A Sangiovese vineyard in Chianti Classico on the north side of a hill makes a peppery sensing wine, while the same grape variety on the sunny, south side might create more strawberry aromas.

Sangiovese has an unusual abundance of tannin and a fruit acidity which creates an appetizingly dry texture that complements food and helps Sangiovese wines stand apart from softer red wines.

Some wine makers craft a light, simple, fruity wine for gulping rather than enjoying. However, some other winemakers craft into medium to full bodied fine wines that earn high marks in critics and age well.
